I. Welcome and Introductions
   a. Today, we’re going to look at some of the results from the 2014 Point-in-Time Count, before we turn to the Strategic Planning Process

II. 2014 Point-in-Time Count Update
   a. Dana: Background on 2014 Point-in-Time Count
      i. We have a new graphic design to the data summary from this year’s PIT Count that displays the data in an informative and exciting manner
      ii. This is a picture of what was happening on the night of January 31, 2014
      iii. Counts conducted in even-numbered years only include those in shelters; counts conducted in odd-numbered years include those who are unsheltered iv. We used HMIS data and a survey that went to a few stakeholders in order to compile this summary
   b. Dana: The Data
      i. We’re cognizant of the need to distinguish between individuals and households
      ii. There were 2,263 sheltered individuals and 1,848 households
      iii. There were 843 adults and 1,356 children; the numbers showed more children due to the inclusion of the large West County School District (consumers do not exit as rapidly)
      iv. 57% of data came from the West County School District, 19% from emergency shelters, and 24% from transitional housing
      v. 51% female, 49% male vi. 38% African-American, 20% Caucasian, 6% bi- or multi-racial, 36% Hispanic (a higher concentration of Hispanic individuals were located in the West County School District)
   c. Dana: Other Notes
      i. Next year, there may be some changes in how we conduct the PIT Count based on what we’ve learned from this year’s Count
      ii. It’s difficult to compare our count to those conducted in other communities, or even to those conducted in previous years
iii. The full report will be uploaded to the website soon and will include methodological details, a description of who was included, and differences from previous years div. Dana put together the data and a graphic designer put it in this format
v. Feel free to contact us if you have any questions; we will send out a message when the report is uploaded

III. Strategic Planning Update
a. Amanda: Background on the Strategic Planning Process
   i. This is not meant to be a full rewrite, but only a refresh based upon the progress we've made in the past ten years and including best practices
   ii. We’re aiming to develop a plan incorporating history, data, and new knowledge; synthesize with feedback from community into the update iii. Our goal is to release the updated Strategic Plan by October 1
